Description:

Stunning large format map of Paris, published by Frederick De Wit in Amsterdam.

Centered on the Seine River, the map illustrates Paris at the end of the 17th Century, with two large tables identifying hundreds of street names and buildings. The map includes two large coats of arms of France and the City of Paris.

A striking map of Paris, first issued by Joannes de Ram from 1690. Notably absent from this depiction are the 'Place des Victoires' and 'Place Vendome,' indicating the plan's portrayal of the city's geography circa 1685, following the work of Jouvin de Rochefort.

This same copper plate was also used by Justus Danckerts, Carel Allard, Jacques de la Feuille, and, around 1700, by Frederik de Wit himself, and finally by Pieter van der Aa in his "La Galerie Agréable du Monde" around 1729.
