Rand McNally & Co's Map of Utah

In terms of natural features, the map illustrates Utah's varied topography. Mountains, rivers, lakes, canyons, and valleys are all clearly marked, offering a comprehensive view of the state's terrain. Notably, the map marks the "remains of Moquis Village in Castle Valley," pointing to the region's indigenous history.

Two reservations, the Uncompahgre Ute Indian Reservation and the Uintah Indian Reservation, are also highlighted:

Uncompahgre Ute Indian Reservation: Originally established in western Colorado for the Tabeguache band of the Ute Tribe, it was later dissolved, with its inhabitants moved to the Uintah Reservation.

Uintah Indian Reservation: Founded in 1861, this reservation was initially for the Uinta, White River, and Uncompahgre bands of Ute Indians.
