Description:

In the changing landscape of Europe at the end of the 18th century, this engraved map of Spain and Portugal was produced by William Faden, Geographer to His Majesty and to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Published in 1796, it illustrates the provinces and kingdoms of the Iberian Peninsula, demonstrating a remarkable fidelity to Spanish and Portuguese provincial maps.

At the time of the map's creation, the echoes of the French Revolution were being felt across Europe. The subsequent wave of Enlightenment thinking and the rise of nationalism would soon lead to the Peninsular War, forever altering the political geography of Spain and Portugal. This map captures a critical moment in time, preserving the quiet before significant historical upheaval.

A visually striking feature of the map lies in the lower right corner, where an ornate title cartouche occupies the space. Goats and grapes surround a prominent rock (Gibraltar), a reference to the agricultural richness of the region, while ships at sea highlight the Iberian Peninsula's maritime heritage.

Dominating this tableau is a woman holding a branch, positioned near a plaque bearing the inscription "HISPANIA SC". This figure, representing Hispania, personifies the Iberian Peninsula, a widespread trope of the era. The initials "SC" stand for "Senatus Consultum", pointing to the authority of the Roman Senate. The presence of Hispania and the Roman Senate's insignia together signify the lasting impact of Roman governance on the region, neatly tying the present geographical representation to its historical antecedents.
