Description:

A meticulously detailed and decorative map by F. Vivier, circa 1720, depicting the region approximately 40km surrounding Paris and Versailles, extending to Mantes, Senlis, Melun, and Rambouillet, featuring a figurative cartouche and an additional engraved title. The map was published by the renowned German cartographer Johann Baptist Homann.

F. Vivier, the original cartographer, created this intricate map of the area around Paris and Versailles, capturing the region's geography during that period. The map showcases various towns and cities, including Mantes, Senlis, Melun, and Rambouillet, providing a comprehensive view of the landscape within a 40km radius of the French capital. The additional engraved title emphasizes the significance of the region as the central part of the Isle of France's government.

The map is not only known for its precise details but also its artistic appeal, featuring a figurative cartouche that adds an element of visual interest. The key accompanying the map provides information on various features, such as cities, market towns, villages, monasteries, castles, abbeys, farmhouses, courts, chapels, watermills, and windmills. Vivier's work, published by Homann, represents the cartographic style and craftsmanship typical of the early 18th century and serves as a valuable historical record of the region surrounding Paris and Versailles.
