Description:

A large, meticulously detailed map of the Sultanate of Oman, published by the National Survey Authority of Oman in May 1994, this map showcases the country's geography, infrastructures, and major landmarks, while emphasizing that it is not an authority on international boundaries.

The map is based on existing mapping data, with limited field revision carried out in March 1994. A unique feature of this map is the clear statement regarding the inalienability of islands, reefs, rocks, shoals, sandbars, and other exposed land surfaces within the territorial waters of Oman, even if they are not depicted on the map itself. This declaration reflects the importance of territorial integrity for the Sultanate of Oman and serves as a reminder of the complex geopolitical context of the region.

The legend of the map offers a comprehensive overview of various geographical and infrastructural
