Description:

The mid-20th-century topographical map of Huesca/Northern Aragon region, prepared by the Dirección General del Instituto Geográfico y Catastral, is an impressive depiction of this part of Spain. The map provides a comprehensive representation of the region's natural and human-made landscapes.

The region's unique topographical features are presented with meticulous detail, reflecting the cartographers' skills and the accuracy of the mapping technologies available at the time. Rivers, streams, and other water bodies are carefully marked, signifying their importance in the region's ecological and hydrological systems.

An aspect worth noting about this map is its use of symbols and color. Different colors are used to distinguish between various land uses and cover types, such as forests, agricultural fields, and urban areas. A detailed legend assists users in interpreting these symbols and colors, adding to the map's usability.
