Description:

Lively pictorial map of New York and New England, published to promote travel about the Greyhound Company bus lines.

The map is filled with whimsical touristical and recreational images, showcasing the summer and winter sports and recreational activities in the region, local culture, history and communities. Several images reflect racial and culture stereotypes of the period which would now be considered offensive.

The verso and cover include decorative illustrations, an outline map of the US and illustrations of the interior of a Greyhound bus.
