Description:

Attractive separate topographical map of Crater Lake National Park, in Oregon. This is a reproduction of the 1933 edition of the map released for public sale by the U.S. Interior-Geological Survey in 1957

A main feature of this map is the colored topographic lines, roads, and waterways. In the key there is an explanation of the different roads in the region: Medium duty, light duty, unimproved, and the State Route. The roads are illustrated in red or dashed black, leaving a subtle yet distinct impression on any area they are in. Similarly, the light blue that is used for Crater Lake is eye-catching and the initial draw to this map. Brown topographic lines compliment the cream background and make for a thoroughly attractive map of the area.

Although a rerelease, the map contains the same elegant charm as the original 1933 edition. Despite an updated 1946 edition existing, this map does not include any of the additional information added. This
