Description:

Fine example of the scarce 1857 state of Colton's map of Minnesota Territory, which extends to the Missouri River.

Massive Pembina County and Yankton Country dominate the western 2/3rds of the map. Only a handful of counties appear in Minnesota, north of the Mississippi River.

The map shows many Indian Tribes, villages and other early notes, along with early towns and roads. Only a small portion of Minnesota has been surveyed.

States

Strangely enough, the 1855 edition has a somewhat more modern-looking western border to the Territory, running approximately straight north to south.

In the 1857 edition, the western border of the Territory is more undulating.
